2. One Day Student Seminar “ Basic and Applied Sciences for Home Scientists”

Report

On 26th September 2022, the Department of Food Technology and Home Science, Vivekananda College organized a one-day student seminar “ Basic and Applied Sciences for Home Scientists” from 09:00 AM - 3:30 PM. Fourteen participants were present on that day in the first session held with the resource person Dr. Meenakshi Vachher. She discussed about enzymes: – the definition of enzymes as biocatalysts, activation energy of a reaction and its relation with enzymes, active sites of enzymes, vitamins as co-enzymes, metal ions as cofactors and prosthetic groups. The effect of substrate concentration on enzyme activity and effect of temperature on enzyme activity were also discussed. Further, they were informed about the enzyme competitive inhibitors. The importance of LV plot, which tells about the relationship between substrate concentration and reaction time was also discussed. Information on non-competitive inhibitors and allosteric enzyme reactions i.e. the modulator/regulators of a biochemical reaction were also shared. The overall session was very interesting. Active participation of all the students during the whole session was seen. Students took notes and asked questions.
